HENRY KELSTON

AHDOOT WOLFSON

Henry Kelston's practice is concentrated in the areas of class actions, securities litigation and electronic discovery, representing consumers and investors nationwide.

Mr. Kelston is currently representing consumers in class actions involving breast implants allegedly associated with certain cancers, the unlawful use of facial recognition and location tracking by leading technology companies, and improper bank fees charged by major national banks.

He has been on the front lines in data breach cases against some of the largest technology companies in the world and has represented consumers in class actions challenging food labeling practices, including several cases against major food manufacturers contesting the use of "natural" claims on products containing GMOs. Mr. Kelston's work in In re Conagra Foods, Inc., contributed to a groundbreaking decision by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, significantly strengthening the rights of consumers to bring class actions. He is also currently representing limited partners defrauded by the managers of a private investment fund worth nearly $1 billion.

Mr. Kelston is a frequent speaker and CLE presenter on electronic discovery. He is a member of The Sedona Conference® Working Group 1 on Electronic Document Retention and Production. Most recently, he assisted in drafting The Sedona Conference® COMMENTARY ON LEGAL HOLDS: THE TRIGGER & THE PROCESS (2019) and served on the faculty for The Sedona Conference® E-DISCOVERY NEGOTIATION TRAINING. Mr. Kelston teaches E-Discovery at Legal Services of New Jersey's In-Depth Litigation Skills Training Program and is a member of American Association for Justice Class Action Group.
